

I feel that consumers have a right to decide who calls them or not and by taking away this great weapon we have against these obnoxious telemarketers we will not have the right to stop them from calling. We need to maintain the Telephone Consumer Protection Act. It benefits us, the consumers, and we have a right to privacy. We do not have to be bothered with calls we do not want nor should we have to live with aggravation because of unwanted calls. Telemarketers just don't get it when we tell them not to call us and they continue to bother us. They give us no privacy and no respect. I have received calls on a Saturday at 8:80 am while everyone in my home was sleeping. They have also called my home late at night after my children have gone to bed. I should not have to put up with this and when you tell them not to call you no more, they don't listen and next week you have the same company calling you again. What rights do we have as consumers, shouldn't it be us the ones who decide who we want calling our homes. Since I registered for the no-call-list I have not received any unwanted calls and that's how I want it to be. Please do not take away that right from us.

Thank you in advance for taking the time to consider this request.

Sincerely,
Yaile Garcia
